1972 GRAND ROUNDS GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF MEDICINE

Some days the wind blew bitter cold,
shaking our house of bread,
and the mice came running
out of the walls and floors.

On days like that
(and there were many some days)
we learned each other by heart.
We learned each mental machination
of the other and committed them to memory.
We imitated each other's handwriting.
We drew pictures on each other's souls.

Some years later we had children
with a college girl
and bit her arms and back on numerous evenings
and devoted our hands to Georgetown Medical School and spent many afternoons in various swimming pools.

Some days the wind blew bitter cold,
shaking our house of bread,
and the mice came running
out of the walls and floors.

On days like that
(and there weren't quite so many as before)
we learned each other by heart.

What does it mean to grow?
Adding cubits, waxing wise
Only at the end of our exercise
To discover an endless beginning.

DEDICATION

Our dedication is to the one individual who has exemplified those qualities most respected and valued in these early years of our medical careers.

He has shown us that the art of education is more than instructing from a lectern; it is a personal and total involvement in each student's learning process. We recognize the effort he has put forth on our behalf to organize a complex array of seemingly unrelated data into a meaningful whole. The knowledge and, more importantly, the interest which he has imparted are lifelong gifts which must be transmitted to each new generation of physicians.

Because of his genuine devotion to teaching and for demonstrating so clearly those ideals upon which we will form our lives, we dedicate this yearbook to Richard Gillis, Ph.D.

OFFICE OF THE DEAN

November 15, 1971

To The Graduating Class of 1972

Dear Friends and Graduates,

It is a special pleasure each year to comply with the invitation of the yearbook staff to write this message. At this moment, I am completing internship letters for each of you. I have had the opportunity of reviewing each academic record, including the evaluations written by your instructors in the junior clerkships. I hope you will not be surprised to learn that your faculty has a very high opinion of your talent, competence and industry.

I will not dwell on the fact that these past four years have been exciting ones, both at Georgetown and elsewhere. The world has changed and so have we. There are some who think we are preparing well for the future of medicine, as evidenced by the fact that this year we are again breaking the all time record for number of applications to an American medical school!

You are now undifferentiated physicians, and among the best of that species. Ten years from now you will be hopelessly obsolete as physicians if you have not dedicated yourselves to a lifetime of study, applying the habits and methods of learning that you developed here at Georgetown under the guidance of your dedicated faculty. You must cope with a body of medical knowledge that is increasing relentlessly.

As you head towards differentiation in a variety of careers -- the clinical specialties, family medicine, teaching and investigation, administration -- you will be reminded of this school frequently and in many ways. Come back to Georgetown as often as you can to tell us of your accomplishments, and to see ours. Let us share our futures together.

Sincerely,

John Rose

There is a curious paradox
that no one can explain.
Who understands the secret of the
Reaping of the grain?
Who understands why Spring is born
Out of Winter's laboring pain?
Or why we must all die a bit,
Before we grow again.

I do not know the answer.
I merely know it's true.

Why do the young die?
Why does anybody die?
Tell me.

I don't know.

What's the use of all your damn books?
If they don't tell you that,
What the hell do they tell you?

They tell me about the agony
of men who can't answer questions
Like yours.

If they ask you how I am
Tell them I am quieter now
  My heart no longer jumps at Milton
  But treats that master coldly, casually
My eyes are also quieter now.

Say I do not talk so much
  As when I did not know
  Who Wyatt and Surrey were
  Who wrote what naturalistic novel
  When I came with bag and baggage and no brains.

Tell them I am not so drunk
  On simple bourbon
  Without ice cubes
  My back is arched a bit
  My stomach slightly expanded.

I sit praying for no spring
  But only wicked winter
  Playing stud poker with my sinuses.

The winter reminds me of you
  And your slim, tall body
  and your soft knowledge.
The snow reminds me of you and your orange sherbet dress
  and removing it.
The ice reminds me of you
  and your quick monotone
  telling me where to get off at.
The frost reminds me of you all listening to me limp in the snow
  picking me up, carrying me back.

Which one of you it was
  Who taught me how to pray
  and love the frozen ground
  That the linden could be lovely
  Hanging bare against the moon
  That I could weep at nickel cheap songs
  And all God's chillun got wings or halos
  Or some such things
I don't recall.

Tell them I am surer now and warmer
  Now and harder if you touch me
Tell them I am stronger now
  And bathe more often
  Sing not so much
  Speak not so loud
Tell them I am sitting
  Rarely crying
  Praying for the frozen ground
  Thinking of another spring.
